Go-Givers extends the SEAL programme into the wider context of society. Every society in the world has to balance off the tensions between harnessing individuals' ambitions for personal achievement, and the needs of the wider community. This perennial tension that often leads to imbalance: to 'haves and have-nots' finds expression every day in the simple interactions of children and adults. The same social learning that informs how we share, care and cooperate in the classroom finds immediate comparisons in our social systems. These values are the bedrock of functioning democracy, no matter the colour of the ruling political party.

Go-Givers demonstrates how we might restore compassion for one another as human beings. Instead of competing we should try to cooperate. Instead of fighting, we should seek to compromise. Instead of hoarding we should share, because the only way we are going to achieve happiness as a society is together.

The Go-Givers programme contributes to the social and emotional aspects of learning; self-awareness, managing feelings, motivation, empathy and social skills; by developing the following attitudes:

- Empathy
- Care
- Respect for other people's views and experience
- Concern to act fairly
- A spirit of enquiry
- An optimistic standpoint.
